

Detailed Table of Contents

Preface	vi
Acknowledgements	vii
How to use this book	xix

Introduction

A. How can you know the issues on the exam before you go into the exam room?	1
B. What do you mean by resolving the core legal issues with advocacy argument?	1
C. What array of skills is necessary for such advocacy argument?	2
D. How does the focus on advocacy argument differ from other materials?	2
E. Is there an advantage in learning the criminal law as advocacy argument centered on the leading issues?	3
F. Where does this approach come from?	3
G. Ten Competencies for Legal Performance	5

Chapter 1: Perspectives on the Primary Role of the Criminal Law

Introduction	7
A. Controlling Crime	7
B. Protecting individual rights by regulating the power of police, prosecutors, and judges in exercising their crime-control role	7
C. Protecting dominant political, economic, and social values	9
D. Promoting a scientific approach	10
E. Promoting a defensible morality	11
Conclusion	13

Chapter 2: Purposes of Criminal law Sentencing

Introduction	15
A. Deterrence	16
A dialogue	16
Individual deterrence	17
General deterrence	17
B. Retribution	22
Kant's retribution	22
A contemporary retributive view	24
A critique of contemporary retribution	24
Popular forms of retribution: Not just Kant and theory	25
The trial judge needs help in a sentencing	25
A dialogue	26
C. Rehabilitation	29
A dialogue	29
Jurisprudential objections	30
Criminological objections	30
D. A blend of deterrence and retribution	31
E. Concluding comments on sentencing	31
F. A Postscript	33
G. Purposes of Criminal Law Statutes in Addition to Sentencing	34
Practice problem in sentencing	35
Other issues	38

Chapter 3: The Constitutional Framework for Sentencing

A. The Eighth Amendment Ban of Cruel and Unusual Punishment	41
B. The principle of proportionality and sentence length	41
C. A judicial dialogue: Judge Defer and Judge Intervene	43
D. Professor Delaney's Comments	48
E. At the very periphery of sentencing	48

Chapter 4: A Broader Constitutional Framework

Introduction	51
A. Ex Post Facto Laws	51
The old and the new	52
B. Bills of Attainder	53
C. Void for Vagueness Doctrine	54
Vagueness and the First Amendment	55
Vagueness, Overbreadth and the Military	57

Chapter 5: Two Fundamental Principles Required for Culpability

A. A Mens Rea is Essential	59
Introduction	59
Morissette : Abandoned property or stealing?	59
The MPC to the rescue	62
Common exam errors	63
B. A voluntary act — actus reus — is also essential	64
Introduction	64
“To have and to hold”	64
Summary of types of involuntary act	66
Common exam errors	67
C. A Model for Analyzing Criminal Liability	67
The procedural context for applying the model	68
Thus, always ask for each core crime studied	69
D. Omissions may fulfill the actus reus requirement	69
Breach of statutory duty	69
Breach of common law duty	70
Capacity to aid	71
Awareness of need for aid	72
Constitutional limitation: The omission must be blameworthy	72
Another constitutional limitation: A status is not an act	73
Public Drunkenness— act or condition?	74
Summary of omission-to-aid categories	75
E. Exam Policy Problem	75
A strong student argument against the proposal	76
A weaker student argument in favor of the proposal	77

Chapter 6: Larceny-type Offenses

Overview	79
A. Common-law larceny	79
Introduction	79
Two high-noon examples	80
An example of unlawfully argument	82

The trespassory taking element	83
Breaking bulk is a taking	83
Lies are a taking	85
A unilateral mistake and a taking	86
B. Embezzlement	87
A high-noon example	87
An example of unlawyerly argument	88
Beyond the high-noon example	88
C. Larceny by false pretenses: Beyond larceny and embezzlement	89
A high-noon example	89
D. The corporate crime wave	91
Deceit has many faces	91
E. Larceny by trick: Beyond larceny by false pretenses	93
F. Robbery: Just add force or fear to common-law larceny	93
G. Extortion	96
A high-noon example	96
Beyond high-noon examples	97
H. A recapitulating problem: Agnes at work and play	98
Decoding the first paragraph and outlining your arguments	99
Writing out the arguments	100
An unlawyerly response to Agnes and the false pretense charge	105
I. Modern theft consolidation statutes	106
J. Common exam errors in analyzing larceny-type issues	106
K. Summary of larceny-type offenses	107

Chapter 7: Criminal Homicide — Intentional Murder

Introduction and Overview	109
A. Intentional murder — the anchor murder	110
A high-noon example — the “smoking gun”	110
Unlawyerly argument: Repeating the facts but not interweaving them	111
Another high-noon example	112
Another unlawyerly argument: The college essay	112
B. The model for analyzing core crimes applied	113
Beyond the high-noon examples	114
Just opening the window and teaching a lesson	115
C. Abolition of intent-to-cause-serious-bodily-injury murder (manslaughter)?	119
D. Some twists in intentional murder issues	122
Missing the intended victim but killing nevertheless	122
Watch the swinging doors	123
Expressing frustration is sufficient	124
E. Common exam errors	125
F. Intentional murder with premeditation and deliberation	126
A high-noon example	127
G. Murder in the first degree	129
H. Degrees of murder vary widely	129

Chapter 8: Extreme Reckless Murder

Introduction and Overview	131
A. High-noon examples	132

B. Beyond the high-noon examples	134
Ignorant or culpable or both?	134
Who killed the victim?	136
Are the teen-age robbers also murderers?	138
Tragedy — culpability or exculpation	142
Dog-mauling killings	144
C. A short recapitulating problem	146
D. A recapitulating and challenging multi-issue problem	149
The Good Old Boys	149
Other issues	152
E. Common exam errors	153

Chapter 9: Felony Murder

Introduction and Overview	155
A. High-noon examples	156
B. Limiting the scope of application of felony murder	159
Beyond the high-noon examples: Another common limitation	161
Other fencing in strategies	162
C. Broadening strategies	162
Another broadening strategy: The res gestae theory	163
D. Felony murder and a flexible or strict view of proximate causation	164
For liability	165
Against liability: A much stricter sweep for proximate cause	166
Against liability: A justifiable homicide is insufficient	166
Against liability: An excusable homicide is also insufficient	167
Against liability: The killing must be in furtherance of the felony	168
E. New clothes for tort proximate cause: Extreme reckless murder	169
The return of the teen-age robbers	170
F. Multi-step argument: No predicate felony equals no felony murder	171
“After all I have done for you in the past”	171
G. A special defense to felony murder and more: A short essay exam	172
H. Other Issues and Common Exam Errors	176
I. Beyond the examples — an exam policy question	177
J. A recapitulating short exam essay	180
Two car thieves: one from hell, and the other from heaven or environs	180
The car thief from hell	180
An inferior argument of the felony murder charge	183
The car thief from heaven	183
What might Aristotle say?	184
K. Common exam error	185
L. Partial summarizing table for felony murder	186
M. Summary of Murders	187

Chapter 10: Accomplice Liability (Complicity) and Criminal Facilitation

Introduction and Overview	189
A. High-noon examples	189
The innocent aider	191
A Good Samaritan is not an accomplice	192

A challenging episode: “After-all-I-have-done-for-you-in-the-past” lives again	192
B. A recapitulating multi-issue problem	194
C. Withdrawal from accomplice liability	201
D. Criminal Facilitation: A “little sister” to complicity	202
High-noon examples	202
E. Common exam errors	204
F. Beyond the statutes and policies: A jurisprudential assessment of these murders	205
Judge Vigorous, the apostle of positivism	205
Relevant positivist principles	205
Application to crimes of murder	206
Judge Just, the apostle of natural law	206

Chapter 11: Manslaughters: Between Murder and Exculpation

Introduction and Overview	209
A. Voluntary manslaughter	209
B. The common-law, heat-of-passion voluntary manslaughter, and the MPC approach ...	210
A high-noon example	210
Another high-noon example	213
C. Beyond the high-noon examples	214
A problem: A master manipulator	214
D. Problem: A “peaceable, high-minded young man” or a murderer?	217
The take-home exam version	218
An in-class, closed-book version for comparison	221
E. A policy appraisal	225
I prefer the MPC approach	225
A somewhat different voice in support of the MPC approach:
I prefer the common-law approach	225
F. Variations on the reasonable man in the MPC approach	228
G. Comment and other issues	230
H. Common exam errors	232

Chapter 12: Reckless Manslaughter

Introduction and Overview	235
A. High-noon example	235
B. The return of X, the flailing-out stabber and killer	237
C. A doctor or just a drug dealer?	238
D. A police officer runs amok	239

Chapter 13: Criminally Negligent Manslaughter

Introduction and Overview	241
A. The MPC to the rescue	241
B. High-noon examples	242
C. Absence of fault	245
D. A homicide postscript: “Mental autopsies”	249
E. A hollow triumph: A reflection on the structure of murder and manslaughter	250
F. Summary of murder and manslaughter	251

Chapter 14: Attempt

Introduction and Overview	253
---------------------------------	-----

A. High-noon example	255
Another high-noon example: Arguing the common law and MPC approaches	256
B. Beyond high-noon examples	259
The subjective trumps the objective	260
A challenging episode: Who killed C?	264
A final rigorous episode	266
C. Two radically contrasting policy and jurisprudential approaches	268
D. Other issues	270
E. Common exam errors	270

Chapter 15: Conspiracy

Introduction and Overview	271
A. Policy justifications	271
B. Conspiracy: “The prosecutor’s darling”	272
Hearsay and co-conspirators: One for all	272
Conspiracy and venue	273
Conspiracy and unfair prejudice	274
Additional prosecutorial advantages	275
C. Conspiracy One: Basic Conspiracy	275
A high-noon example	275
A twist on a high-noon example: The conspiratorial objective	276
Does “no” mean no liability?	277
D. A policy issue: Why the requirement of an overt act in some jurisdictions?	279
E. Conspiracy Two: The “chain” conspiracy	280
A high-noon example	280
Another version of the chain conspiracy	283
F. Conspiracy Three: The “wheel” or “hub-and-spoke” conspiracy	284
High-noon example	284
Another version	285
G. Renunciation or withdrawal from conspiracy	286
High-noon examples	286
H. Common exam errors	287
I. Critical Comment	288
J. RICO: “Conspiracy on Stilts”	289
Introduction and Overview	289
K. The RICO statute: Four crimes	290
The 1 st RICO violation: Legal acquisition of an enterprise with illegal funds	290
A statutory definition of “racketeering activity”	291
A statutory definition of a “pattern” of racketeering activity	291
The 2 nd RICO violation: Illegal acquisition through illegal means	291
The 3 rd RICO violation: Illegal use of an enterprise	292
L. The 4 th RICO violation: RICO conspiracy	293
Enterprise conspiracy: From specific crime to infrastructure	293
RICO as remedy for deficiencies of traditional conspiracy	294
No wheel conspiracy	294
And no chain conspiracy either	295
RICO to the rescue	295
M. RICO: Not in violation of the Federal Constitution	295

N. Critical Comment	296
O. Against RICO	296
Concluding Comment	297

Chapter 16: Rape

Introduction and Overview	299
A. Another historical perspective	300
B. A partial map of the terrain as you begin	301
C. The substantive and evidentiary revisions: An introduction	301
D. The common-law requirement of “utmost resistance” to force illustrated	302
E. Resistance: Not an analytical decision	305
Resistance: Race, class and gender power	305
A redefined actus reus requirement of “resistance” to force illustrated	306
Another example of a redefined requirement of resistance to force	309
A legislative redefinition of resistance	311
F. Are coercion and the instilling of fear sufficient to constitute 1) force and 2) the absence of consent?	311
Abuse of authority	311
Which non-physical coercion should suffice as force?	313
Fraud and other substitutes for force: California statutory substitutes for force that also spell out rape	314
G. A legislative remedy: Shifting the focus to the defendant	315
H. Mens rea , strict liability, and the defense of mistake of fact	316
A strict liability approach.	316
Mens rea and the defense of mistake of fact	317
The subjective approach: The “rapist’s charter”	317
The objective approach: A soft version	318
I. Substantive and evidentiary reforms	320
Marital Exemption	320
Corroboration and prompt complaint	322
The victim’s sexual history and rape-shield laws	323
Admission of expert testimony on rape trauma syndrome	324
J. Rape, lynching, and discrimination	325
Rape and the Federal Constitution	326
K. The Model Penal Code to the Rescue?	326
Conclusion	328

Chapter 17: Justification and Excuse (The Defenses)

Introduction and Overview	331
A. Self-defense and Defense-of-another	332
Introduction	332
High-noon example	332
A more challenging high-noon example	334
B. Beyond high-noon examples: Deadly force	336
One against four: Self-defender or murderer?	339
A homeowner as killer	344
Preemptive attack	346
C. The Whistler — a challenging problem: Good Samaritan or not?	349
D. Common exam errors	352

E. Defense of habitation and defense of prevention of felony	353
F. A policy problem	356
G. Other twists	360
H. Common exam errors	360
I. Defense of law enforcement	361
Introduction	361
High-noon example	361
Beyond the high-noon example: A private citizen	362
Arrest for a misdemeanor	363
A constitutional fetter — the fleeing felon	364
The dangerous fleeing felon	365
Other variations on the Garner facts	366
Competing policies	366
Common exam errors	369

Chapter 18: The General Defense of Justification — Necessity and Duress

Introduction and Overview	371
A. The defense of necessity	371
High-noon example of necessity	372
More high-noon examples of necessity	373
B. Getting beyond the high-noon examples	375
C. Political necessity	377
D. No necessity in England — no cannibalism even in extremis	379
E. The defense of duress	381
High-noon example	381
F. Moving beyond the high-noon examples	383
G. Misapplication of the duress defense	385
H. Escape from intolerable prison conditions — Necessity or Duress?	385
I. Common exam errors	387

Chapter 19: Defenses of Mistake of Fact and Law

Introduction	389
A. Mistake of fact	389
A high-noon example	389
B. Beyond the high-noon examples	390
Criminal negligence is not a mistake of fact	391
Defense of mistake of fact in bigamy?	392
Mistake of fact in statutory rape?	394
Mistake and degree of the offense	396
C. Mistake of law	396
Introduction	396
A high-noon example	396
Beyond the high-noon example	399
Constitutional fairness	400
Reliance on an unconstitutional statute	400
Other versions	401
Reliance on a lawyer's advice	403
D. Common exam priorities and errors	404

Chapter 20: Defense of Legal Insanity

Introduction and Overview	405
A. The policy justification for the defense	405
The M'Naghten Rule: The majority rule	406
The American Law Institute's substantial-capacity test — a minority rule	408
The congressionally imposed rule for the federal courts	409
B. Other Proposals	410
Abolition of the insanity defense	410
The justice test	411
The product test	412
C. Substantive rules are not all: Tightening the procedural standard	413
D. Summary of the legal insanity rules	415
E. Competency to Stand Trial	416
A high-noon example	416

Chapter 21: Defense of Immaturity

Introduction	419
A. High-noon example	419
B. Minimum due-process rights for juveniles	420

Chapter 22: Defense of Intoxication

A. Introduction to voluntary intoxication	423
A high-noon example	423
B. The more expansive MPC rule	425
C. Beyond the high noon example: Restrictions on the defense	426
Intoxication and recklessness	426
Intoxication and insanity	426
Alcohol derived nerve	427
Intoxication and the reasonable person	427
D. Involuntary intoxication	428
Conclusion	429

Chapter 23: Defense of Entrapment

Introduction and Overview	431
A. High-noon example	432
B. The MPC supports the objective test	433
C. Divergent rationales for exculpation	434
D. Beyond the high-noon example: The subjective and objective approaches	434
E. Private Citizens	436
F. Due process and fairness	436
Concluding Comment	437

Table of Cases	439
Index	441
Other Books by Professor Delaney	445